

A new chapter begins for Le Cordon Bleu London in January 2012!

After nearly fifty successful years at 114 Marylebone Lane, Le Cordon Bleu London is excited to announce its new International Flagship School of Culinary Arts and UK Headquarters located in the heart of London at 15 Bloomsbury Square, WC1.

Founded on a rich history of tradition, Le Cordon Bleu has been dedicated to sharing its wealth of knowledge and passion for the culinary arts for over 100 years. The school now moves fittingly to London's oldest square, Bloomsbury Square, created by the pioneering Lord Southampton 336 years ago as the piazza to his mansion with many 18th and 19th century houses still remaining. The square has had numerous famous residents but is most closely associated with the literary and artistic 'Bloomsbury Group'. Several members of the group lived in the area in the early decades of the 20th century, including biographer Lytton Strachey and novelist Virginia Woolf.

The building design will feature state-of-the-art kitchen and classroom facilities offering students the latest and most innovative opportunities in culinary education. In addition, to meet the demands of the growing market, a wide selection of new courses and programmes are in development for Le Cordon Bleu London.

ABOUT LE CORDON BLEU: Le Cordon Bleu offers the most recognised and prestigious culinary training programmes in the world. Courses available at Le Cordon Bleu range from certificates earned in just 11 weeks to the coveted Le Grand Diplôme, a 9 month programme in cuisine and pastry, considered the passport to the culinary world.

Le Cordon Bleu London culinary arts programmes are accredited with IIQ Level 4 on the UK National Qualification framework. The Level 4 qualification is one of the highest practical culinary qualifications in the UK and is recognised internationally. In addition, Le Cordon Bleu London holds the Highly Trusted Sponsor Licence under Tier 4 with the UK Border Agency.
